Freedom and the Divine Plan

The Four Freedoms, originally articulated by Franklin D. Roosevelt, are “as much of the Plan as humanity can reasonably put into effect” at this time. The quality of freedom is essential for humanity “to live, to think, to know, and to Plan.”

Please discuss freedom—as an ideal, as a quality, or as a principle—and its role in the evolution of humanity in the new age. You may approach this from any angle you wish, potentially even drawing from one of Roosevelt’s four freedoms specifically. These are:

- Freedom of Speech and Expression
- Freedom of Worship
- Freedom from Want
- Freedom from Fear
